BUSY WEEKEND IN GERMANY!

Time for the next round in the DMV Tourenwagen Challenge and also a huge VIP guest programme at the DTM premiere. The only problem is that the two activities are on two different race tracks! Fortunately our DMV race that will take place at Nürburgring will be decided Friday and Saturday, and the DTM premiere at Hockenheim is on Sunday.

For the race at Nürburgring I will once again team up with Lars Edvardsson and that feels good after our very successful start in the series. Hopefully we will be able to keep the momentum and still be on top in in our class after the two heats Saturday.

Nürburgring is without doubt one of my favourite tracks and I do not have to ask for the way to the podium. The Eifel mountains is also my favourite part of Germany.

Apart from my own racing I am really looking forward to the DTM premiere and also the support races where we have plenty of young Swedish drivers that normally are doing really good.

My feeling is that I will have no problems to fall asleep on Sunday evening after a very busy weekend in Germany.

...and that the sun will shine over Germany. If so happens we can recommend this nice brand of sun protection you can buy at the DTM fan site for just 3.50€.

That was a birthday party!

Swedish tennis ace and racing driver Hans Simonsson, Peter "Poker" Wallenberg and Tony.

Last weekend I was part of an extraordinary event when Peter "Poker" Wallenberg celebrated his fiftieth birthday with some 200 friends at Malmby Fairground just outside Strängnäs in Sweden.

The guests where offered four different stations with different exclusive car related activities, and me together with four other professional drivers had the pleasure to offer the guests hot laps around a small race circuit.

Good fortune with the weather, an organisation that was running like clockwork and so many happy faces - this was a birthday party that any "petrol-head" just would dream of.
